

Every part of the animal was used – meat, bones, horns, hides and sinews.

Eat like Torak! Ask your mum for a delicious venison burger.

Skinning a deer would have taken hours with stone tools – today it can be done much quicker.

Today Forestry Commission Scotland wildlife rangers cull deer to keep our forests healthy – and for venison.

This boy is helping his father butcher a wild boar – the whole family was involved.

Birch had many uses, the bark making good containers like this basin.

Wolf Brother, by Michelle Paver, is a novel about life in the Mesolithic forests of 10,000 years ago.

